Thanks to all who responded to my query posted to the SCI listserv regarding score binding in the Santa Cruz area. I managed to get the score bound, though it was considerably more challenging than I thought it would be. For those who may be interested, the following provides a list of suggestions I received, as well as the solution to my particular situation.

The goal (again) was to get an 11x17 score bound with something considerably more sturdy than the standard plastic comb binding.

Among the suggestions I received were:

1. Ask the library where it will be deposited for help or suggestions
2. Get the score bound at Kinko’s (or similar) with a coil binding instead of a comb
3. Explore Staples, which offers a combination coil/comb binding
4. Go through Judy Green Music

The Kinko’s where I live most of the year, near Kansas City, stocks 11x17 vinyl backs and clear plastic fronts. My minimum acceptable bind for this job would be the plastic comb with those covers. I didn’t find any place in the Santa Cruz area that stocks those covers in that size, which surprised me. Similarly, no one stocks 17-inch binding combs or coils. That was not surprising, as I’ve never found a place that did. Several places (such as Kinko’s and OfficeMax) were willing to work with me to overlap two combs or coils to cover the entire 17-inch edge, but could only use card stock covers for the score—and that would be too flimsy.

My next thought was to explore #1 above. The library for which my score was destined is far from Santa Cruz, but I went...

The deadline for applications is October 22, 2004.

John G. Bilotta

On July 23, 2004, at the 2nd Annual Festival of Contemporary Music, John Bilotta's most recent chamber work Shadow Tree was premiered. Shadow Tree, an impromptu in one movement, was performed with delicacy and assurance by Meghan Miller, alto flute, and Josh Friedman, guitar. The festival, which featured the works of nine composers from California and Oregon, was held at the Park Boulevard Presbyterian Church under the direction of Brian Bice and C. Michael Reese. The accompanying photo of Josh, John, and Meghan was taken the night of...

Members of SCI will receive their dues billing this month. In 2000 the Society changed it’s fiscal year to begin in September instead of January so as to correspond more closely with the concert season and academic year.

All statements are sent electronically which has sometimes caused confusion. When second notices go out there are invariably members who claim that they didn’t get a bill—meaning a hard copy. They are correct. In the interest of keeping overhead low, SCI has not mailed hard copy statements in three years.

Members may respond simply by mailing their check. If they wish, they can print a copy of the bill, but it is not necessary. Usually cancelled checks will serve for tax purposes but for those members needing a receipt, simply request a receipt with your payment and it will be sent to you by return mail.

Dues amounts remain the same for all levels of membership. The last dues increase was in 1996 when full membership went from $45 to $50, and all other levels increased accordingly—except life membership. Lifetime membership, which did not increase in ’96, remains at one payment of $950 or ten annual payments of $110.

Wallace De Pue

Since November 2003, I have been working on The Bird, Frog and Tree Club (full symphony orchestra and chorale), a 32-minute commissioned work by Maestro Paul Stanbery, conductor of the Hamilton/Fairfield Symphony and Chorale (Cincinnati, Ohio, area). The premiere will be given on February 27, 2005, in Hamilton, Ohio (Cincinnati area).

Failure of STUDIO in Composers Competition

Gerald Warfield

The STUDIO for New Music has failed to announce the winners of the Second Annual International Composers Competition and to award the prizes. This, after the original date for announcement of the winners, Jan. 15, 2004 was extended to July 19, 2004. Molly Sheridan, of the American Music Center investigated the STUDIO and JD Hixson, the "main man behind STUDIO." The general conclusion was that Hixson had made a best-effort attempt to manage the contest, but had gotten in over his head. You can read Sheridan’s report at: www.newmusicbox.org/news.nmbx?id=00381

Questionable contest practices were a hot topic on the SCI listserv last year. Unfortunately, there is very little one can do to protect against fraud or incompetency in new music competitions. Tom Wells, President of SCI, said in an e-mail recently to one of the contestants: "We’ve all been burned in [contests] like this, but shared experiences don’t necessarily improve the personal situation.”

High entrance fees are a possible danger sign, and the International Composers Competition fee of $40.00 seemed to push that limit. On the other hand, the contest had a history, and the first year of the contest seemed to have been successfully completed albeit the concert of the winning pieces was postponed. Unfortunately, it now appears that at least some of the prize winners of the first year’s contest have not been paid. Further, we understand that Hixson has had serious medical problems that included a stay in a NY hospital intensive care unit.

The STUDIO has a Web site which, as of this writing, is still down. Their e-mail address is StudioNewMusic@aol.com.

Members with more information on this situation are invited to post their remarks on the SCI member listserv, scimembers@list.serve.com.

the festival, Meghan Miller is a graduate of California State University, Hayward, has studied with Trevor Wye at his studio in Kent, England, and will be entering the Longy School of Music in Cambridge, Massachusetts, this fall. Josh Friedman graduated from the University of California, Santa Cruz, receiving both his BA and MA there. One half of the Santa Cruz Guitar Duo, Josh teaches privately and through Music Together, as well as teaching the history of guitar at UC, Santa Cruz.
There are three movements (durations included): The Sensible Bird (15:55), The Friendly Frog (7:45), and the Servant Tree (9:15). They are unified as a continuous composition through melodic material, orchestral forces and poetry. Each movement is distinctive in style: the first is a discourse between a lyric soprano and her observers in the chorus; the second is highly “contemporary” and depicts a frog who celebrates life in a swamp like musical atmosphere; the third is the celebration of life as experienced by trees that swirl in the wind, shelter wild life, and serve mankind in countless ways.

This composition is also arranged for SATB with organ. Both versions may be performed apart from the others without any loss of musicality.

The approximate voice ranges for the entire work are: solo, A1–a2; alto, a–d2; tenor, D1–g2; bass, F–D1.

David Vayo

On April 15, David Vayo’s Mosaics and Webs, commissioned by the National Association of College Wind and Percussion Instructors, was premiered at that organization’s annual conference in Minneapolis. The performers were faculty and students from Ball State University, conducted by Christian Zembower. On April 29, the Sound One Festival at the University of Illinois included the world premiere of Vayo’s Three for Two, a set of clarinet duos performed by John and Lisa Reams. Play of Hands was performed on July 13 in Tokyo by harpsichordist Michiyo Honma, and Prayer: In Memoriam Olivier Messiaen was performed by organist David Hatt in a July 18 concert at St. Mary’s Cathedral in San Francisco.

Vayo’s percussion composition Border Crossing was used as the soundtrack to a dance composition by Laurie Cameron of Pomona College, which was performed a number of times in late April and early May at Pomona and at the Festival of Solos and Duets at the Fountain Theater in Los Angeles.

to the UCSC library to see where they send things. They were very helpful and pointed me at the UC book bindery, which is in Oakland. Between that bindery and several others I found in the yellow pages (a learning experience—I didn’t know binderies existed that would do single copies of books) I explored this option further. Unfortunately, I couldn’t find one who wanted to do this job. Most of the binders I found are artists themselves, doing hand binding, and they didn’t like the idea of the book just sitting in a library, gathering dust. I respect that, but it didn’t provide a solution to my problem.

In the end, I received a suggestion from a neighbor this summer to visit an art supply house and see if they could help me out. This route worked for me. I had them cut two pieces of matboard (like you use in framing pictures) to 11x17. Then I took those covers and the score to Kinko’s, where they bound it with an overlapping coil bind. The final product is much stiffer than it would be with the card stock covers (or the vinyl/plastic covers) and looks quite nice. Using matboard enabled me to pick a very pretty color for the cover (I like that). Finally, I put an 8.5x11 Avery label on the front cover with the title page. In the end, it’s quite a nice-looking score, and sturdy enough to live on the shelf without deforming.

I didn’t explore #4 above, mainly because I’d forgotten about Judy Green Music and already had the score bound when the suggestion arrived. I expect they could do the job very nicely, though I’ve heard they are usually pretty expensive. All told, the matboard and Kinko’s bind came to about $12 interest.
